Abstract

This is a great paper and it has a concise abstract.

1. Introduction

This is where the content of your paper goes. Some random notes:

- You should use LaTeX(Lamport, 1986).
- JMLR/PMLR uses natbib for references. For simplicity, here, `\cite` defaults to parenthetical citations, i.e. `\citep`. You can of course also use `\citet` for textual citations.
- You should follow the guidelines provided by the conference.
- Read through the JMLR template documentation for specific LaTeXusage questions.
- Note that the JMLR template provides many handy functionalities such as `\figureref` to refer to a figure, e.g. Figure 1, `\tableref` to refer to a table, e.g. Table 1 and `\equationref` to refer to an equation, e.g. Equation (??).
